How Do I Know Which Painting is 'The Right One'?

*"The main thing is to be moved, to love, to hope, to tremble, to live." ~
Auguste Rodin*

Joy... Anger... Sadness... Happiness... Melancholy... Hope...

Paintings can evoke all kinds of emotions in anyone who looks at it. And because of this, there's no specific answer to what makes a painting the 'right one' for your home.

It's your emotions that will play a key role. How do you let your emotions guide you in your decision-making? How do you base your decision on trends or what other people say? Or worry about what other people will think of your choice?

The most important thing to remember is that the right painting will touch your heart.

It must tug your heartstrings and evoke positive emotions.

That's the only way to ensure that you'll love the painting for a very long time - it will not serve as mere decoration in your home.

Ask yourself these questions as you look at a painting:

- What are the things I like about it?
- How do I feel when I look at this painting? And does it match the 'feel' that I want to have in a particular room?
- What kind of thoughts does this painting evoke?
- Are there any memories that come up as I look at it? And if so, are they positive or negative ones?

If your answers to these questions are positive, it means that the painting is something that has touched your heart. And with that, it will be something you'll have an everlasting love for.
